About Iğdır

Iğdir in the Eastern Anatolia Region of Turkey, Turkey's highest mountain, Ağrı Dağı, (the Biblical Mount Ararat) is in Iğdir province, but much of the land is a wide plain far below the mountain. The area's name came from "Iğdır Bey", the oldest son of Cengiz Alp who was one of six sons of Oghuz Han belonging to internal Oghuz three arrows branch considered to be the 21st of the 24 Oghuz branches.

Located in the plains surrounded by mountains, Iğdir has a surprising geography with its varying topographic structure. This large area surrounded by Alagöz Mountain (4058 m) on the Armenian border to the north, Karasu – Aras mountain range and Lesser and Greater Ağrı Mountains to the south has an interestingly different land structure. Vivified by the Aras River to the north, Iğdir Plains is dominated by the green of orchards and agriculture fields, while the heights to the south shadow the plain with its snow white peaks. The land between the mountains and the plains has a varying view with deep valleys, streams, seasonal ponds, volcanic calcified lava flow and natural formations resembling Cappadocia. The skirts of Ağrı mountain at the south of Aralık and Karakoyunlu Counties is adorned with mainly black lava flow and calcified scum, while the central county and South of Tuzluca has a soil composition of harmonious pink, brown, white and green.

The trace of this historical wealth can be observed in many parts of the city. On the route of caravan, Iğdir hosts plenty of castles. Almost always nested on rocky ground on high peaks, these defensive structures are Karakale (Sürmeli), Karakoyunlu, Iğdir (Korhan), Güngörmez (Koroğlu), Kasımın Tığı, Gaziler (Bahçecik Village) Kız Castle, Âşık Hüseyin, Katırlı, Aslanlı, Gedikli, Yağlı Castle, Aliköse, Kumbulak, Bahçecik (Rağbet) Koroğlu Castle, Çiçekli, Şedik Castle, Kalaça (Galaca), Kandilli.

Karakoyun, Yüceotağ, Alçalı, Kumbulak and Ünlendi Castles. Unfortunately most of these castles have been destroyed. Karakale Castle with only parts of its walls erect, located in a military zone 2 kilometers to Sürmeli; Koroğlu Castle in Bahçecik Village and Şedik Castle near Elmalık Village and Iğdir Castle in Korhan Plateau can be visited.
